John Deere increases its Premium line of utility tractors

Firm agricultural machinery John Deere has announced for the third quarter of this year, the upcoming release of a new series of utility tractors.

Reportedly from the company, the new models are designed to replace the previous 5 Series utility tractors John Deere Premium.

The new series of high-performance compact tractors will be presented at agricultural fairs held this autumn in France, Germany, Italy and Poland, has just as advanced a spokesman for the firm.

For details that distinguish this new series, the company has not given more information and has indicated to be published in time for the celebration of the aforementioned events.

Source: John Deere